Confirmation of the place of origin of our ancestor Jacques Ériché, research findings carried out by François and Jean-Claude Richer

Communiqué of March 20, 2004

Jacques Ériché is born around 1664 in Louvetot, France (insee code 76398) and he died on December 24, 1747, in St-Laurent, New France.

Jacques Ériché is the ancestor of all Richer dit Louveteau (Ériché, Héricher, etc. and their variants in USA: Richa, Lefto, Lifto, etc.). Also, by the marriage of his daughter Marie-Josephe with Pierre Plouf, he is of interest for this branch of the Plouffe family.

At his marriage celebrated on April 7, 1698, in Notre-Dame church in Montreal, and also on his marriage contract¹, we can read « that he is a soldier in the company of Mr Levasseur, captain of a marine detachment, son of late Jacques Éricher (Ériché?) and Catherine Pin, his father and mother, native of Louvetot, Normandy, Archidiocese of Rouen... and that he is thirty-four years old », which suggests that he would be born in 1664. However, until now, no act was recovered to confirm these assertions.

Given the fact that the ancestor of the Leduc originated from the place known as Louvetot, in Normandy, Archidiocese of Rouen, which has been linked to Grigneuseville (insee code 76328) at the beginning of the XIXth century, it was suggested that Jacques Ériché could have come from this locality. An exhaustive search in the registers of this place, independently done by Louis Richer^{2 3} and ourselves, did not identify any trace of a marriage of a Jacques Éricher or a Catherine Pin. Or a birth of a Jacques Éricher, even if a baptism of an Ériché was detected for the year 1621.

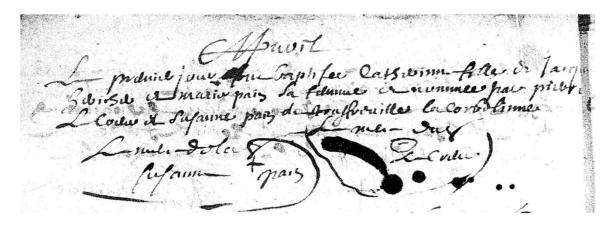

For the other Louvetot place (insee code 76398), registers for the years 1587 to 1668 are not available. At the suggestion of Daniel Héricher, Jonathan Picceu and Jean-Louis Chevaillier (GGHSM – 73 7732 Member of Bolbec au fil de la mémoire) that we thank for their collaboration and suggestions, we were able to examine the registers of this parish. The acts were photocopied from microfilms made available to researchers by the Departmental Archives of Seine-Maritime.

Even it has not be possible until now to find the birth certificate of our ancestor, because of gaps in the records of Louvetot, it is now established that he had at least one sister, Catherine. Furthermore we can confirm that his parents' names, who died when he was a young child, were Jacques Héricher and Catherine Pain (even if the orthograph of these names may have varied) and that he was originating from Louvetot (insee code 76398), which is located not far from Allouville-Bellefosse, between Yvetot and Caudebec.

It was suggested that Jacques Ériché might have contracted a first marriage before his departure for New France. This possibility cannot be excluded, but no document relating to such a marriage could be found until now.

Jacques Héricher (1636-1671)

Our researches led us to the Protestant temple of Lintot. The baptism of a child named Héricher on August 24, 1636, corresponds to the likely date of birth of Jacques Héricher, father of Jacques Ériché, our ancestor who came to New France. His father and mother names are Jean Héricher and Magdallaine Desruyaux, from Gruchet, and the godparents are Jacques Héricher and Jeanne Postel, also from Gruchet. This locality is about 20 km from Louvetot.

Whitout being able to establish unambiguously that these persons are really the father and mother of our ancestor, the concordance in time and places lead us to believe that they are the parents of Jacques Ériché who came to New France. Further research in this direction is ongoing.
